NEWLY CREATED STUDY COURSES DRAW INTEREST

Arrangements Are Being Made To Care For Students Who Transfer Here

Efforts of the local school board of the Comanche Independent School District are at present directed towards meeting all requirements specified by the State Board of Education with reference to high school transfers from rural schools including school busses.

Requirements of the State Board have not yet been completed for the coming term, but it seems highly probable from news releases from Austin, that all high school students will be required to attend an affiliated school.

There is no effort on the part of the local school authorities to interfere with other schools, but the school authorities desire to co-operate with the surrounding smaller schools and to make arrangements for transferring high school students where it is the desire of both schools concerned.

The Vocational Agricultural Department which was established in the Comanche school a year ago is proving popular with students and will be of special benefit to those who come from rural schools. The Home Economic Department is another branch of school work that has an appeal to all girls and can be taught successfully only in the larger schools.

The Comanche schools have made progress during the past few years and are now on a substantial financial basis and if all school taxes which are now delinquent are paid promptly it will help the school stay that way, members of the board point out.

The new Music Department established this year under the direction of Pat Howard offers an opportunity for free instruction in band and orchestra music that is often charged for at the rate of $5 or $6 a month in other schools.

7-Year-Old Boy Dies From Burns Received Nov. 10

Rubin Clifton Koerner, age 7 years, died Sunday, March 3, as a result of burns suffered on last November 10th, according to the Gorman Progress. He was the third one of the children badly burned in a fire which destroyed their home at that time. The other two passed away within a few hours of their injury. The little boy never recovered from his injuries and his burns would not heal to any extent.

Interment was at the Oliver Springs Cemetery Sunday afternoon with R. H. Echols officiating as minister.

Seventeen Pigs In One Litter; All Still Living

Some sort of championship can be claimed by C. W. Jones, farmer of the Blanket Creek community, says the Brownwood Bulletin. The question is to find another that can vie with what recently took place on Mr. Jones' farm. He has a big white brood sow which recently gave birth to a litter, or herd, of 17 pigs and all are still living.

The Bulletin says evidently this is one sow that has not heard of the corn-hog reduction program or she is planning to reduce the corn supply through increasing the pork supply.

Troy Marshall and family of Kopperl spent the week end in Comanche with his brother, Joe Marshall.

SPRING CLEAN-UP URGED BY STATE

State Health Department Points Out Need

The accumulation of winter's debris represents a distinct menace to the health of adults and particularly to little children, according to Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, who urges everyone to clean their houses and yards at this time. It is not only good housekeeping, but ordinary sanitary principles indicate the necessity of prompt removal of all waste matter in and around the neighborhood of yards of homes, but the definite lessening of the spread of diseases, especially those affecting infants, is vitally connected with this procedure.

Flies help spread typhoid fever, dysentery, diarrhea, tuberculosis, anthrax, and cholera. They breed, live, and feed in filth. To prevent their increase all refuse should be disposed of at once, garbage kept in covered containers, privies made sanitary, and houses screened. Every neighborhood raises its own flies, so that their number is an index to the sanitary conditions.

Mosquitoes are responsible for the spread of malaria, dengue, and yellow fever. Malaria is spread by the bite of the Anopheles or malaria mosquito. Dengue fever and yellow fever are transmitted by the Aedes Aegypti or Tiger mosquito. The best way to prevent these diseases is to destroy the breeding places of the mosquito. They breed in standing water, therefore, one should drain, ditch, or fill such places, spray oil on water each week, or stock the water with surface minnows as they will eat the wiggletails. Houses should be well screened to protect against these insects. After the spring cleaning is finished, it should be kept in this condition at all times.

Rains over the watershed of Lake Brownwood last week caused a half foot rise in the lake's elevation. Ted Hall, lake superintendent reported that elevation before the rain was 1,392.8 and after the rain it was 1,393.3.

COTTON SIGN-UP TIME EXTENDED

Lack of Forms for Signing Cause of Delay

Wednesday, March 20th was the time set for all local committeemen to stop signing cotton reduction contracts, as the deadline had been set on that date. Due to the fact that the office has run out of all forms, and cannot get any more at the present time, and extension of time to a later date is announced by Tom J. Wortham, assistant adjustment agent. The time for the completion of the sign-up is uncertain he said, due to the fact that the forms will be delayed in reaching his office.

All producers, Wortham said, who signed a contract in 1934 must sign for 1935. Producers who did not sign a contract in 1934 are given the opportunity to enter in the reduction contract now.

JOHN MCAFEE IS BURIED SUNDAY

Former Contractor Buried At Dublin

John McAfee, who for the past four months had been confined to his home and who had been bedridden for the past month, suffering with cancer of the stomach, died Saturday evening, March 16th at Dublin.

Mr. McAfee who was one of Dublin's finest and noblest citizens was born in Ellsworth, Kansas on June 12, 1868. He came with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. McAfee to Dublin when thirteen years of age, making his home there since that time.

On December 24, 1888 he was married to Miss Thennie Henderson and to this union four children were born; three of whom survive and are: Mrs. William Cantrell of Dublin, Mrs. C. L. Hord of Gatesville, and John T. McAfee, work superintendent at the CCC Camp near Weatherford. Mr. and Mrs. Cantrell came to Dublin from New Mexico about a year ago to be with the father who was then ill. Mrs. McAfee passed away 4 years ago. Besides the three children there is one little granddaughter, Dorothy Lee Hord, many nieces and nephews and a host of friends, made during his long residence in Dublin who are left to mourn his loss.

When a young man, Mr. McAfee learned the stone mason trade, later going into brick and stone building contracting; building many of the brick and stone buildings in this section.

He was a quiet unassuming man, possessed of those sterling traits of character which go in the making of the finest type of citizen and Christian gentleman; truthful, honest, industrious, not quick to pass judgment on his fellow man and tolerant of the shortcoming of those about him. He was a member of the Bantist Church.

He was highly esteemed by the business men of Dublin; all of whom claimed him as a friend.

Funeral services were conducted at the home on Sunday afternoon, March 17th, Rev. J. M. Bradford and Rev. P. W. Walker officiating, attended by a host of friends from Dublin and from Comanche, Stephenville, Brady, Gatesville, Abilene, Glen Rose. Burial was at the Old Dublin Cemetery. THE PEOPLE OF TEXAS Needed it Yesterday!

YESTERDAY hundreds of Texas communities and thousands of Texas homes had no electric service. They wanted it! They needed it! They needed it then! To have it meant better living in better communities. Better opportunities for people to work under better conditions. Not to have it meant drudgery. Hardships. Lost opportunities!

Twenty-two years ago a group of Texans organized the Texas Power & Light Company to bring transmission line electric service "To Those Who Needed It Most." The very progress of those people . . . Texas people . . . demanded this transmission line electric service.

What more worthy undertaking could challenge the courage of Texans than to supply this need? The challenge was met. The need was supplied by private industry, working for the public good!

THIS foundation for a higher standard of living had to be laid years ago in order that today's benefits could be realized. It was laid. Those communities served by the Texas Power & Light Company today have the fruits of unexcelled transmission line electric service. The cost of electric lighting service to the people has been reduced more than 35% during the past ten years.

This chart shows that electricity is cheaper to our customers today . . in spite of the fact that the cost of living is rising sharply. This Company will make it still cheaper . . . voluntarily . . . just as rapidly as good business will permit further reductions.

During the past 22 Years we have brought Transmission Line Electric Service to 197 Texas Towns that had No Electric Service Before

TO THOSE WHO NEED IT MOST

W. L. HOLMSLEY IS BURIED HERE

Member of Pioneer Comanche Family Died at Midland

W. L. Holmsley, member of a pioneer Comanche County family, and brother of Tom Holmsley and Mrs. R. H. Moore of Comanche, died at his home at Midland March 9th after a three weeks illness. His body was brought to Comanche where interment was made Monday afternoon in Oakwood Cemetery.

Services were held at the Holmsley residence in Midland Sunday afternoon with Rev. Kenneth C. Minter, Methodist pastor, officiating, assisted by Winston F. Borum, Baptist pastor. Music was played by Miss Lydie and Ned Watson and the scripture and prayer was given by Rev. Borum. A chorus sang hymns and Mrs. Foy Prortor sang a solo. The Rev. Minter gave the funeral sermon and a tribute to Mr. Holmsley.

The services were concluded the following Monday afternoon at the Oakwood Cemetery at Comanche.

The Holmsleys were among the first half dozen settlers of Comanche County, coming to this section about 1814, Burrel Holmsley being one of the older members of the family to settle here. According to the records, the first marriage performed in Comanche County was between his father and mother, Thomas Holmsley and Bettie Cunningham. Following the organization of the county in 1857, Thomas Holmsley is listed as the first sheriff. Since the organization of the county, the Holmsleys have been among the leading citizens.

The following account of Mr. Holmsley's life is from the Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Born September 4, 1860 in Uvalde County, Texas, "Billy" Holmsley, as his friends called him, was literally raised in the saddle. His father, T. J. Holmsley, had moved to Texas from Arkansas and formed a cattle partnership with a man named Hood who lived in Emporia, Kansas. Cattle were sent up the trail to Kansas to be marketed and Billy Holmsley went with the herd the first time when he was only 13 years old. His second trip was made two years later.

His father, T. J. Holmsley, had made numerous trips to California and engaged in many Indian fights.

In 1876 the Holmsley family moved to Comanche County and Billy Holmsley, although only a youth, was placed in charge of a ranch his father operated in Nolan County. In 1882 he came to the Pecos River Country, working on the Pulliam Ranch at Potoon Crossing. He later started his own herd at a ranch on Liveoak Creek, the place now being owned by Noelke and Murphy.

Mr. Holmsley then established the ranch he has had since that time near Rankin. He operated it continuously until 1927 when he sold his cattle and leased the place, making his home in Midland.

Mr. Holmsley was married twice, his first wife being Laura Ingham of Midland. Married in 1890, she died three years later. Their son, T. J. Holmsley of Amarillo survives.

In 1906 Mr. Holmsley was married to Miss Addie Bruton of Comanche who survives him as do their two sons, W. B. Holmsley and Jack Holmsley of Midland.

A brother, T. J. Holmsley of Comanche and five sister, Mrs. R. E. Chandler, Mr.s S. E. Couch, and Mrs. Willis Johnson all of San Angelo, Mrs. F. H. Oberthier of Hereford, and Mrs. R. H .Moore all of Comanche survive. All of them had been at his bedside, during the period of illness, Mrs. Chandler being in Midland when death came.

Mark Moore came in this week from El Paso to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Moore.

CHAPTER V

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

When Chick Thompson's wife dies in childbirth, Chick is left with the care of little Poochy, his child. His wife's father obtains a court order for possession of Poochy, but Chick steals the baby and makes his getaway. He returns to the carnival, in which he had owned a puppet show, two years later. His pal, Fingers, is with him. Daisy, a girl who has always loved Chick, is overjoyed when he returns. When a Children Society's investigator is barely stalled through a ruse, Chick becomes nervous. Daisy, anxious to marry Chick, tells him of the investigator's words that Poochy can't be taken away if Chick has a wife. Chick immediately sets out to find a suitable mother for Poochy. Daisy is heartbroken.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Chick went on his date. He went, but he didn't get very far, for Helen Holbrook proved to be the wife of one Dr. Taylor, and, therefore, could be of no use to Poochy as a mother. Disgruntled, and more than a little disillusioned, Chick returned to his small apartment.

"Oh, Daisy!" There was no answer to Chick's call. "Daisy!" Chick ran quickly through the apartment. No doubt about it—Daisy was gone! He walked back into the living room, a vast vacuum of loneliness enveloping him. Suddenly, he thought of Poochy's room. He opened the door quickly, silently. There was Fingers, slumbering near Poochy's crib. At least, the baby wasn't left alone! Chick grabbed Finger's shoulder. Fingers woke with a start. When they were out in the living room, Chick spoke.

"Where's Daisy?" His tone was low. No sense waking Poochy.

"Phfft!" said Fingers. "Gone bye-bye!"

"Cut the comedy. Where'd she go?"

"Search me. She phoned for me to come over and mind the kid. When I got here she was all packed. Said she had a wire from her folks and had to leave for Florida right away."

"Florida! Her folks are up in Seattle."

"That's what I thought. But I was too tired to argue with her. Say, how'd you make out with that dame?"

"What dame?"

"The one from the incubator."

"Oh, her? She's a phoney."

"Looked like a 'natural' to me."

Chick talked fast. "Yeah. That's what I thought 'til I got to talking to her. They all look great till you come to sizin' 'em up. So Daisy left me flat, huh? That means she's leavin' the act, too."

"I guess so."

"Well, that's just dandy. What I should have expected, I suppose, you can't trust 'em. Any of 'em! Now I gotta start breakin' in another girl." Chick started to pace the room. "I don't know what kick she had comin.' I gave her a swell berth, didn't I? I let her take care of Poochy, didn't I? Gee whiz, I did everything for her. That's the thanks I get for it."

"Yeah," said Fingers, "that's a woman for you."

"Whadda you know about it? Go on home. Whadda you hangin' around here for?"

Fingers shrugged and started for the door. "'Night, Chick."

"'Night," Chick mumbled, then, "Fingers——"

Fingers stopped in the doorway.

"Thanks for comin' over. Goodnight, kid." Chick turned and walked slowly towards Poochy's room.

When the sun rose the next morning, it seemed no different than other suns. Yet it must have been. Chick would have sworn to that! In the first place, another investigator from the Children's Society came to the carnival looking for Poochy. But Chick had been forewarned. He grabbed Poochy and ran, Fingers following. If the investigator hadn't come they wouldn't have landed in that restaurant. If they hadn't landed in that restaurant, they wouldn't have seen the truck passing with the sign on it about the baby contest and the $500 prize. If Chick hadn't seen the sign, he wouldn't have had an idea. If Chick hadn't had an idea—well——

"It's a cinch!" Chick was enthusiastic. "A lead pipe cinch! Listen—the Children's Society wanna take him away. Why? Cause they think he's being neglected. But they gotta prove it, see? Now, how they gonna get up in court and say the world's most perfect baby is neglected? It don't make sense, see? They wouldn't have a leg to stand on."

"But suppose you don't win? asked Fingers.

Chick looked up. "What do you mean—don't win? How can I miss? All they gotta do is take one look at Poochy—and the contest is over."

"Yeah, I know. But supposin' somethin' happens and you don't win."

"If we don't, then the whole thing must be a frame-up." He crossed the room. "Look at the float I got."

Fingers was skeptical. "Don't looks so hot to me."

"No! That's cause you ain't got any imagination. Wait'll I get it all fixed up with flowers an' things."

"Poochy oughta be dolled up, too," insisted Fingers. "It's a shame Daisy ain't here. She'd know what to do."

"And I don't, huh?"

"Yeah, I guess you do—but Daisy could—I forgot to tell you, Dick. I found out where she is."

"Who cares?" A moment later Chick asked, "Where is she?"

"I was talkin' to Mac yesterday. He says she left town."

"She has? Where'd she go?"

"I don't know. Mac just said she left town—and ain't comin' back."

"Thought you said you knew where she is!"

"I wish I did. I'd like to see Daisy again."

"Oh, you would, huh? Well, you can have her. I'm gonna be too busy with the contest. We gotta win it, Fingers. We can't afford to have nothin' go wrong."

"Oh, you'll win it all right."

"You bet we will. Can't you picture Poochy and me marchin' along in the parade. I can just hear everybody sayin', 'My, My—what a remarkable child!' It's a pushover, Fingers—a pushover."

Poochy might—might with reservations—have had a chance. Only he picked the wrong time to play games. While the judge was examining him, Poochy pulled his beard. The judge was hurt, physically and morally. A beard-pulling child—of all things!

The announcer's voice boomed over the amplifiers. "Each judge will write the name of the baby he has selected, on a piece of paper which he will then seal in one of these small envelopes." He held up the envelope for the crowd to see, then placed it on the table in front of him. He stopped, for a man was dashing up to the judge's stand to talk to him. The man was Fingers.

"Hey, listen," Fingers jabbered, "the man up there—on account of every once in a while—you wanna wait—the noise of the plane is no good." He pointed in back of the announcer. "He told me to come." The announcer turned. As he did, Fingers' deft digits soon acquired the small bundle of votes, and another small duplicate bundle substituted. Into Fingers' pocket went the real votes. "They keep coming and coming. I rushed down—in case they can't hear—so I said sure, I'll go. What'll I tell him?"

The announcer's lower jaw hung low. "What the devil are you talking about?"

Fingers pointed into the air. "He thought maybe that the noise"——

"What noise? I'm not bothered by any noise. Who sent you, anyway?"

"The man. I'll tell him no noise. I'll tell him it's all right. I'll tell him you said it."

Fingers dashed off quickly. The announcer shrugged. Maybe he was wrong. He turned to the package of votes and proceeded to open it. "Here we go, ladies and gentlemen." came the bellowing voice. "In a few moments some little baby is going to become famous. Makes me feel like being young again." As he opened each package, the expression on his face became more intense. But there was nothing to do about it. He spoke into the "mike" again. "Well, here it is, ladies and gentleman. The votes were divided four to one. The one vote went to that very lovely child, No. 16, Carolyn Henderson. The other four votes—and the winner of the contest—No. 14, Poochy Crawford." The announcer called still louder. "Poochy Crawford—No. 14. Well, isn't he here? No. 14—Poochy Crawford!"

Chick was electrified into action. "Yeah! Yeah! Here I am!" He dashed up to the Judges' stand. "Here I am! I mean, here he is. No. 14—Poochy Crawford."

The announcer's lips were set in a thin line. "Congratulations, Mr. Crawford. Will you say a few words into the radio?"

"Yeah, sure."

Chick would have been immensely pleased if he could have seen the delight written on Daisy's face when the decision was announced. Of course, Daisy was among the spectators. Wasn't Poochy concerned?

"Can't you picture me and Poochy marchin' along in the parade!"

(Posed by Lee Tracy and Dickie Walters)

As soon as the decision was announced, Chick was besieged by representatives of milk firms, shoe firms, clothing firms and all sorts of firms that could possibly use Poochy's endorsement for their products. In the Judges' stand, however, things were taking place. The Judges couldn't, for the liver of them, understand how Poochy won when they had all voted for the Henderson girl. Tnen the Special Policeman remembered Fingers. Suddenly, in the midst of Chick's elation, the Special Policeman and two detectives swooped down. It didn't take them long to search Fingers and find the real votes. Chick was amazed. He tried to explain. But he was politely told His Honor would rather hear the explanation.

Chick turned away from the detective to take Poochy's hand. He straightened, trembling. Poochy was gone!

"Where's Poochy?" He turned to the crowd surrounding them. "Anybody seen the kid?" No answer. Chick was terrified now. "Hey—the kid's gone!"

"Come on!" snapped the detective. "Quit stallin'!"

Chick pleaded. "I ain't stallin'. He was here a minute ago. He's liable to get killed or somethin'." Chick started to walk away.

"Wait a minute!" barked the detective. "Wait a minute! What're you tryin' to pull?"

"You gonna let me find the kid, ain't you?"

"Nothing'll happen to your kid. If they find him they'll bring him down to headquarters. Take 'em away, boys."

The detectives started to march Chick and Fingers away. Chick winked to Fingers, and Fingers "got it." Whirling suddenly, Chick's fist lashed out, catching the detective's jaw squarely. Fingers performed similarly. As the officers fell, Chick and Fingers started to run, their cries of "Hey, Rube!" rending the air. The S.O.S. signal of all circus and Carnival folk—"Hey, Rube!"

The booths were emptied. Every human connected with the carnival poured out to aid the fleeing Chick and Fingers. The call went out—"Poochy was lost!" Pandemonium broke loose. The search began!

"Poochy's lost!"

Daisy, standing with Mac, heard the cry. Stifling the words that came to her mouth, she dashed off to join the hunt. Daisy bumped into the Sword Swallower.

"If the detectives find him first," gulped the Sword Swallower, "we're sunk!"

"Find the kid!" came the order from the detectives.

Somewhere, in the midst of this milling, surging mass of humanity was Poochy. Somewhere — but where?

The detectives were hot on the trail of Chick and Fingers, who managed to stay just one step ahead of the law. Chick swerved suddenly in his flight—for there—there in front of Chick's own booth was Poochy, playing contentedly! Chick swooped him up and carried him into the tent.

"Now, listen, Pooch, if you ever kept your mouth shut, do it now." He put the child in a large packing case and pulled down the lid. The detectives were outside. No time to lose! Chick and Fingers dashed out the back way.

The fight was on in earnest now. Fists beat out in abandon. A peanut vendor shouted wildly as his stand was overturned. Well he might have shouted for the flames from the small roaster licked out to catch on to one of the canvas tents. The dry cloth blackened, then roared into a blazing inferno. Sparks shot out. Other tents became ignited. A wooden booth had caught!

Meanwhile, Chick and Fingers had left the Fairgrounds. It was safer on the city streets.

"That's doin' it." Chick grinned. "When the excitement dies down, we go back and get Poochy."

"Boy, I sure will be glad to get out of this town," mumbled Fingers.

A fire engine clanged past. Another. And another.

"Must be some fire," said Chick. "That's the third alarm." His gaze followed the engines and his face clouded. "Hey—looks like it's around the Fairgrounds!"

He dashed off. Fingers followed warily. After all, the cops would be waiting! They reached the grounds in almost nothing flat. Chick was aghast—his booth was on fire! He dashed madly for the writhing flames. A Special Officer grabbed his arm.

"What a minute! Wait a minute!"

"My kid's in there!" Chick pulled away, but a fireman barred the way. "I gotta get in there," he cried. "My kid's in there!"

Desperately, he yanked himself forward, but as he did so there was a roar, and tent and booth collapsed in a hissing mass. Chick covered his eyes—the horrible picture was too much. Chick's knees were weak. He sat down heavily on a wooden "prop." Finally Fingers took his arm.

"Come on, Chick. No use sittin' here. Might as well go home."

Chick rose slowly, dazedly. Fingers threw his arm around him, and the two made their way back to Chick's apartments. Dismal and heartbroken, they ascended the stairs to the little flat. Nell gone, then Daisy—and—and now—Poochy—Chick could think no further. He felt for the key in his pocket, then opened the lock. His movements were unconscious, automatic. Had he been born into this world just to suffer its miseries? Many men had asked this—none had been able to answer it. Certainly not Chick Thompson, puppeteer in a carnival. Chick walked into the living room. He gasped. Fingers clutched his arm.

"Poochy!"

There, on the divan, was the child, unharmed. On the other side of the room was Daisy, busily packing Chick's belongings into a trunk. But Chick only had eyes for the baby.

"Oh, gee, Poochy." Chick's voice was husky. "I—I thought I lost you, kid. I thought I lost you." He crushed the child to him. "Oh, gee!"

Daisy tried to be matter-of-fact. "What're you gonna do, sit around and mush all day? We gotta get going."

"Daisy!" Chick swung around. "Gee, Daisy, how did you do it!"

"Just a lucky break. I went around the tent looking for you. Figured you'd be hiding there. I was just about to leave when Poochy began yelling, 'Lady! Lady!' What do you mean stuffing him away in a box like that!"

"Why, I thought"——

"You thought!" snapped Daisy. "Well, from now on I'll do the thinking"——

"Gee, Daisy, you'll never know how much I appreciate"——

"Come on—cut out the gab and get busy with some of this packing."

Fingers scurried around busily. "It's practically done."

"Gee, Daisy," Chick's voice broke. "I missed you terribly. So did Poochy, too. You never wanna go off and leave us like that again, Daisy."

Daisy's first impulse was to take him in her arms. Instead, she snapped, "Come on, get going, will you! We got to get out of here!"

"Anything you say!" He began to pack.

"I got the whole thing mapped out for us," said Daisy. "We hire a car to take us to Milwaukee. From there we get a train to Nashville. In Nashville, we lay low for about a week, and then, if everything looks safe, we're heading for New Orleans."

"Okay, Hon."

The packing was finished. Daisy picked up a bag and started for the door. "Come on, let's go."

Chick and Fingers followed. Daisy opened the door gaily. At last—Chick—she'd have Chick—and Poochy! But two detectives stood in the doorway.

"I'm glad," said one, "you're all packed. It's gonna save us a lotta time."

The Judge said, "For interfering with an officer in the performance of his duty; for starting a riot in a public place, and for felonious assault—you are each to serve six months in the county jail." He didn't mean Daisy, of course—she was innocent.

When the Judge asked who was to care for Poochy, Daisy immediately volunteered. "Are you his mother?" asked the Judge.

"Why, no—but"——Daisy stammered.

"But she could be, Your Honor," said Chick quickly. "It'll only take a minute. And I got the two bucks."

The Judge smiled. Poochy smiled. Fingers smiled. Chick smiled. And when the ring was on her finger, Daisy smiled.

And after all, Chick would be out in six months. Gosh, Poochy would almost be a man by then . . . gosh . . . can you imagine?

THE END

The Judge smiled. Poochy smiled. Fingers smiled. Chick smiled. And when the ring was on her finger, Daisy smiled

INDUSTRIAL NEWS ISSUES VIEWS ON MANY SITUATIONS

Views of Conditions Are Given On Affairs Common To Every Day Life

Those who believe that the ncipal menace to the United tates' territorial security lies cross the Pacific in Japan, find mmunition to back their theory the Administration's $500,000,-00 army development program.

Lost in a welter of items conerning new airplanes, additional roops, and a build-up of the ational Guard, is a requisition hat has been little publicized as et—but is of tremendous sigificance. It provides for a great Hawaiian air base, to cost $11,-00,000. Army officer, queried n the meaning of this, said rankly that the war department wishes to move the national rontier 2,000 miles into the Pafific.

It is proposed to have a string f such bases eventually built rom Alaska to Panama.

—o—

Price Fixing Program Has Collapsed

The Administration's price-fixng program in both the indusrial and agricultural fields, can e fairly said to have collapsed. Best opinion holds that the Administration is shifting its posiion, that it will give industry and agriculture more of a chance o work out their own problems, will depend less on legislative palliatives. It hasn't been heralded in headlines, but a number of left-wingers—who are strong for collectivism and regimentation—have recently been eased out of important positions in both the AAA and NRA. The more conservative citizens are pleased —they see a chance to get the kind of governmental policy they asked for and didn't get two years ago.

—o—

Prices Now Higher

Terrific rises are taking place in meat prices. Butter is higher than it has been for many years. Even spring vegetables usually dirt cheap, will, according to forecasts be relatively expensive. Of the major edibles, only fish, which is not subject to AAA control, is not advancing materially in cost.

The result of all this is that AAA is now definitely on the retreat. Crop curtailment will probably be dropped, so that production may increase and automatically stop the present price trend. Protest is coming in against this change, from agricultural centers, which can see only the boon of high prices, but the chances are that consumer pressure will win out. It is probable that all restrictions will be taken off the farmer until prices return to the pre-war level, when the AAA may resume its crop control policy.

We Can't Do Without Metals

If you want to obtain an idea of the value of metals, look around your home, office or factory. Practically everything you use involves one or more metals —automobiles and pens, furnaces and thumb tacks, kitchen equipment and sporting goods.

Every basic industry is vitally dependent upon metals for making and distributing its products or services. If the impossible happened, and we suddenly found ourselves without metals tomorrow, life would have to be carried on in the neolithic manner.

Lincoln Stood For Constitutional Government

A short time ago the nation observed Lincoln's Birthday. It would be a fine thing for the country if American citizens gave a little time pondering the ideals and principles for which the martyred President stood.

Lincoln was the embodiment of true democracy. No man was ever more passionately devoted to liberty, to freedom, to destroying human bondage of whatever kind. His was a loyalty to country that went beyond party, beyond partisan politics—and that would willingly make any sacrifice in order that the nation might endure, progress and prosper. No task was too great, no duty too exacting, if it would help to preserve and maintain those enduring principles laid down by the founders of the country in the United States Constitution.

—o—

Taxes Versus Income

Apologists for the growing burden of taxation often state that the rise in taxes, when measured by the rise in our income, is not so important as it seems.

Yet a recent editorial in the Syracuse Post-Standard says that Federal, state and local expenditures are now five times as great as they were before the war. Tax collections, consequently, have risen in the same proportion.

By contrast with this, the price received by farmers for their products are but 2 per cent above the 1910-1914 level—and the real wages received by industrial workers are but 21 per cent greater.

—o—

The Reckless Driver

Authorative surveys demonstrate that the habitually careless driver, like the habitual criminal, never reforms. If he is reckless, incompetent or congenitally unable to drive properly, the chances are that he will never change. No matter how many accidents he may have, and how many times he may be arrested, he will continue to cause more accidents and violate more traffic laws. Thousands of cases are on record where one driver has been responsible for a score or more of accidents within a relatively short period of time. Such drivers menace the life, health and property of us all—they have no right to drive automobiles.

It is estimated that, after the 1935 legislative sessions close, 85 to 90 per cent of all motorists in the country will be affected by a safety responsibility law. It will be a potent weapon in the war against our mounting toll of automobile accidents—nine out of ten of which are easily avoidable.

—o—

For many years the life insurance agent has been the butt of a thousand jokes. But he has lived to see the day when such witticisms have lost their point and their humor.

Where the good life underwriter used to be a high pressure salesman, he has become a counsellor, comparable to a lawyer, doctor or other professional consultant. Up-to-date life underwriters analyze the needs and aims of their clients and prepare policy plans accordingly.

No investment should be made more carefully than life insuranse. It may be all we will have in old-age—it may be the sole means of educating children, supporting dependents and creating estates. A policy that fits the needs of one man, may be absolutely inadequate for another—it is up to the underwriter to advise on types of policies that meet individual problems. And, as time passes and problems change or vary, it is the work of the competent life underwriter to advise necessary adjustments in insurance holdings.

Saved by new Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil in tasteless tablets.

Pounds of firm healthy flesh instead of bare scraggy bones! New vigor, vim and energy instead of tired listlessness! Steady, quiet nerves! That is what thousands of people are getting through scientists' latest discovery—the Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil concentrated in little sugar coated tablets without any of its horrid, fishy taste or smell.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, they're called! "Cod Liver Oil in Tablets", and they simply work wonders. A little boy of 3, seriously sick, got well and gained 10½ lbs. in just one month. A girl of thirteen after the same disease, gained 3 lbs. the first week and 3 lbs. each week after. A young mother who could not eat or sleep after baby came got all her health back and gained 10 lbs. in less than a month.

You simply must try McCoy's at once. Remember if you don't gain at least 3 lbs. of firm healthy flesh in a month get your money back. Demand and get McCoy's—the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets —approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Refuse all substitutes—insist on the original McCoy's—there are none better.

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

. . . use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

Lightfoot Case Reversed by Court Criminal Appeals

According to the report of the Court of Criminal Appeals on March 6th the case of J. L. Lightfoot, convicted in the District Court of Travis County last July of a charge of evasion of gasoline taxes, was reversed and remanded by the Court of Criminal Appeals, according to the De Leon Free Press.

The grounds for reversal as stated in the Court's opinion was that the trial court charged the jury erroneously regarding the testimony of accomplice witnesses. They held in their opinion that the charge given was hurtful and harmful to the defendant in that it was on the weight of evidence, stated the Free Press.

Y. W. Holmes Makes Tax Statement

This will be my last published communication. There was a heavy payment during the week ending with March 16th. During the time I have been handling the delinquent city taxes for 1932 and previous years, I have collected about ten thousand dollars out of about eighteen thousand dollars delinquent.

But there are many who still have not paid; and I am proceeding with foreclosures, as required under any contract.

But those who have arranged to pay in installments may continue to do so and will not be sued.

Even if a person has been sued, or may be sued, he can arrange for installment payments, and the suit will be held up, if the payments are kept up.

All arrangements must be made with me individually, so I can keep a proper record of the agreements; but the payments may be made to me or direct to the collector.

Of course, the penalty and interest will again take hold from now.
